When, early on Wednesday morning, the second corps had effected the passage of the fames liver at Windowll Point, Gen. Handook was mad by a dispate from the Commanding General directing him that, if previous had arrived, he should ration him men before proceeding toward Reteraburg. Just at the time he received information, seeningly soliable, and conveyed, it believes, by as againer officer who had hat ender up from the position he farrived with supplier. This fact Gen. Hancock communicated to the Commanding General, stating that he would stony begin is uning rations, and would then move forward as directed.
